Lapid's wife invited by US probers to face smuggling rap

By Tomazto Orjias, Inquirer-Correspondent, Manila and Nilda U. Rivera in Los Angeles

THE WIFE of Sen. Lito Lapid returned to Los Angeles, Nevada, on Jan. 18 at the invitation of the Department of Homeland Security in connection with the offense she committed in November 2011 of not declaring the $50,000, she carried to the United States, her American lawyer said yesterday.

"[Marina Lapid Lapid] came at the invitation of the Homeland Security. She was invited to deal with the issue," lawyer Elliot Klinger said in a telephone interview yesterday.

Klinger told reporters that Marina has denied smuggling money into the US and that his firm would "vigorously" defend its client against the smuggling charges.

Senators fear Corona trial could drag on for months

By TJ Surigao and Cynthia D. Balana

A NUMBER of senate-judges in the impeachment trial of Chief Justice Renato Corona yesterday expressed dismay at the prosecution's plan to call some 100 witnesses to the stand, saying this would cause the proceeding to drag on for months.

"I wonder which delaying the impeachment trial now," Senate Majority Leader Vicente Sotto III curtly said in a phone interview. "That's up to them. We're ready for anything."

Defense lawyer and spokesperson Transil Salvador III pointed out that Corona's trial was "not about numbers but the quality and substance" of the witnesses' testimony.

His colleague in the defense, Ramon Esguerra, also said that while the number of the prosecution's witnesses was "astronomical," it was substance that mattered.

Salvador said the prosecution could not just call any witness of "its best work" to the stand. "They have to show that the witness can testify on matters in the

UN hails PH for 'very good, prompt' disaster response in CDO, Iligan

By Jerry E. Espinosa

UNITED NATIONS Secretary General Ban Ki-moon's special representative on disaster risk reduction has commended the Philippine government and church and civil society groups in Northern Mindanao for their "very good and prompt response" to the Dec. 15 flash floods that devastated parts of the cities of Cagayan de Oro and Iligan.

Margareta Wahlstrom, head of the Geneva-based UN International Strategy for Disaster Reduction, also praised the non-government organizations' plan of action for the survivors of the disaster that left more than 1,200 people dead and many others injured and missing. "Clearly, you have done very impressive work," she said.

No reason for China to worry-Palace

By Herman Badillo

CHINA need not be alarmed or even take offense over the Philippines' discussions with the United States for an increased American military presence in the archipelago, a Malacanang official said yesterday.

Secretary of Defense Ermita, a communications aide of President Aquino, said the talks between Philippine officials and their US counterparts deal neither any offensive posturing for the alleged aggression in the West Philippine Sea (South China Sea).

Asked if a new agreement meeting an expanded US presence in the Philippines would undermine China, General said, "No, because..."

"We are merely taking steps to enhance our own security and all these intentions are of a defensive nature and there is no effort being made to project any offensive capability," General said in a rare message.

He said the US comes to assistance, if at all, would be based in the unchallenged Philippine territory. There will also be no presence in the West Philippine Sea.

China was the second largest economy in the world. Since the late 1990s, the Philippines have been growing despite various and conflicting claims in parts of the South China Sea. The US Pacific Command clarified in a news conference that the US does not intend a general military presence in Southeast Asia but was not working permanent bases in the region.

Adm. Robert Willard said arrangements announced in recent weeks to station American ships in northern Australia and back US Navy vessels in Singapore would enable the US to rotate forces through Southeast Asia more easily, and without the cost of maintaining bases there.

He indicated the US was willing to enter an agreement with the Philippines.

"We would welcome discussions with the Philippines along these lines but there is no intention for the US to station troops in the Philippines," Willard said.

In southeast Asia, the US Pacific Command has 10,000 troops stationed in Japan and 20,000 in South Korea. Willard said their primary concern was to protect the sea lanes in the South China Sea that carry 90 percent of commerce annually, including $1.2 trillion in trade with the US.

In Washington on Friday, senior US and Philippine diplomats and defense officials completed two days of strategic talks.

They agreed to increase cooperation in areas including maritime security, disaster, emergency and disease relief, a joint statement said.

Both sides have been at pains to say that notwithstanding the risk of permanent tensions, there will be no escalation of the Philippines 30 years ago war to the north.

But in Manila, foreign secretary Albert del Rosario said, a foreign presence in the Philippines was not something that would be considered with the US and a "meeting and more frequent presence by them."

Fighter jets, weapons

The Philippines also were given training and American military hardware, an additional US Coast Guard cutter, a squadron of F-16 fighter jets and other weapons to bolster territorial defense.

This follows a scenario over China's growing military power and dominance in the South China Sea, where the Philippines, Brunei, Malaysia, Vietnam and Taiwan all have overlapping territorial claims with the Asian superpower.

The US says it has no intention to increase the number of troops in the Philippines and in the Pacific region, but it is willing to increase the number of troops in the Philippines and in the Pacific region.

on shipping lanes. But in part, Chinese claims the US strategic shift to Asia and deployment of forces in the South China Sea are attempts to contain it.

Willard expressed concern over "some kind" of escalation between the two sides, but he said the US would support the Philippines in the South China Sea, to contribute to regional stability and prosperity. With 400,000 troops, 400,000 troops.

Bishop's assembly tackles Church matters, nat'l issues

By Jerome Aring

THE CATHOLIC Bishops' Conference of the Philippines (CBCP) opened its semi-annual plenary assembly in Manila yesterday to tackle Church matters and pressing national concerns.

Over 130 bishops from various churches were expected at the three-day gathering at the Pope John Center on UN Avenue. It would be the first time the new CBCP president, Eduardo Achacoma, was expected at the three-day gathering at the Pope John Center on UN Avenue. It would be the first time the new CBCP president, Eduardo Achacoma, was expected at the three-day gathering at the Pope John Center on UN Avenue.

Chief Justice Renato Corona. Corona, in his opening remarks, only alluded to the impeachment trial as he spoke about the country's sad state and how to move forward.

Achievements from the national elections, there are a host of issues that need to be tackled and solving to our people. The reality of graft and corruption, unemployment and continued deterioration of our human and social conditions in poverty and related problems. In this time, with the obvious apathy among the masses because of our government, we need to work with the people but instead we are now working and collaborating with each other to implement laws and programs that bring about growth and development. Corona said we can do this as we look to the sky. Corona said.

San Felipe Ilocos Norte recently said on the CBCP to provide the people with "moral guidance" and the "right perspective" on the state of the nation. "Under the last church and in the midst of poverty and suffering, I pray that we, members of the CBCP, use up our full capacity that from a hope. We hope to see in the last Pope John Paul II's 2002 apostolic exhortation, Pastoral Care, that is what we are called to be. Bishops of hope. As bishops, we are to be people of hope, living and hoping," Corona said.

As Church leaders, Corona added, he said the bishops should be instruments of unity and reconciliation in the country.

'Shabu' now costs more than 'coke'

By Of Top

IN BRISBANE, where the cocaine is sold, "shabu" is the Philippines is facing out to be the city's most expensive "coke."

At P1,000 per gram, methamphetamine hydrochloride fetches a higher price than cocaine in the country, which counts among the most expensive markets for drugs in Asia, according to the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA).

"Cocaine is cheaper than shabu here," said PDEA Director General Jose Gutierrez Jr., noting the street value of cocaine at P1,000 a gram per gram.

"There's no market for cocaine in the Philippines at all," Gutierrez said in an interview last week.

On the other hand, shabu, dubbed the past month's cocaine, is bought and sold by people from virtually all segments of society, said PDEA Director Adnan Almonte, head of the agency's anti-drug monitoring team.

Figure from the United Nations Global Drug Progress for 2011 showed that as of 2009, the Philippines had the highest price in Asia for methamphetamine street sold at the wholesale level, ranging from $107,000.00 to $200,000.00 (P1.7 million-P30 million) per kilogram.

This is slightly higher than the PDEA's own estimate of P5 million per kilogram. Actual agencies' methamphetamine from the Philippines were not available in the UN report.

Indonesia was second at $131,200 to $200,000 per kg, followed by Singapore with $102,500 to $170,000 per kg, both at wholesale. Thailand, Japan and Bolivia also had relatively high prices for methamphetamine, while China was further down the list at $60,000 to $12,000. No figure was available for Hong Kong on wholesale methamphetamine prices.

In contrast, although no figure for wholesale cocaine prices were available for the Philippines, the report indicated that cocaine is sold at widely varying wholesale prices in many other countries from a low of $300 per kilogram in Peru to a high of $1.8 million in the US.

Cocaine is a powerful stimulant drug derived from the leaves of the coca plant, while shabu, another highly addictive drug with similar addictive properties, is synthesized from artificial chemicals such as ephedrine. Both usually come in white powder form and are smoked, snorted or injected intravenously.

The PDEA attributes the high cost of shabu in the Philippines to its own efforts, as well as of other law enforcement agencies, to snuff out its difficult-to-drug manufacturers and distributors overseas here.

In fact, shabu is sold at much higher prices in the province. In Misamis Occidental, P1,000 per gram, but in Zamboanga it can reach P7, 400 (Shabu's price), Gutierrez said.

But rather than be a deterrent, this strong drug prohibition even more, especially those from other countries, whose members at times, with varying success, in being their business to the Philippines, Gutierrez said.

Power of 10 LGUs fosters health, justice, inclusiveness power of effective local government, will receive tomorrow in Malabon the Galing Pook awards. The annual events have recognized outstanding local leadership for 38 years.

This year's winners include four LGUs each from Vigan and Marikina and two from Laguna.

Awardees from Ilocos are the province of Iligan and an internal health unit in Quirino, composed of the towns of Tinalandia, Tuba, and Tuba and Tuba.

Vigan winners are Linao town, Southern Linao, Alibon, Bala, Bala and one of its towns, Malabon, which was separately recognized.

Malabon

In Malabon, awardees are the province of Marikina, Marikina District, Lila in Marikina, and Zamboanga del Norte.

Seven winners—Luzon, Marikina, Marikina, Marikina, Marikina, Marikina, Marikina—will be honored for the second time, Galing Pook Foundation said in a statement.

The winners were chosen from 127 nominees from across the country. They were chosen based on the following criteria: innovation, positive results, sustainability and sustainability, people's participation, and efficiency in program service delivery.

This year's winners showed effective implementation of projects on rural health, indigenous peoples' empowerment and speedy delivery of justice.

Growth for all

Ms. Nieves Cordova, Galing Pook Foundation chair, said, after 38 years and more than 250 awards later, the search for innovative sustainable development by local governments and communities, even in the most challenging conditions, ensured that growth was for all, and not just for the elite.

In winning the Galing Pook award, Marikina District demonstrated that areas were not always the solution to inequality.

The local government struggled to build roads in landslide-prone areas to the indigenous 16-person community, promoting trade and commerce. Before the new road opened the village to the rest of the province, some parts used the area to trade, taking advantage of its mountainous and mountainous in their indigenous government form.

In development gradually spread to the community, peace was restored.

Nutrition plan

The local government of La

Marikina, a poor Southern Luzon municipality, lost millions in Philippine history books at the site of the first Galing Pook award, implemented an "Integrated nutrition plan" to reduce malnutrition, which often kept children away from school.

Between 2004 and 2009, malnutrition rates dropped from 8.8 to 2.6 percent among preschoolers and from 6 to 2.2 percent among grade schoolers.

In Marikina, Saragat province launched the Justice Enhancement and Empowerment Program (JEEP), deploying a mobile court to its municipalities to speed up the resolution of cases involving poor litigants.

Since the launch six years ago, the program has obtained the number of dockets at the local judiciary 140 to 200. The issue of Lila in Marikina started an information technology (IT) project that has been a model for neighboring municipalities. Established in 2004, the Community e-Connect (eC2) project "remains the only fully operational center" in Marikina providing IT and even broadband capacity to its residents, Galing Pook said.

Empowering Subanen

Zamboanga del Norte was recognized for inclusive government, bringing the indigenous Subanen community "into the mainstream" through the Provincial Indigenous People Coordinating Unit. The office encourages the Subanen to participate in local development.

Vigan winners proved health and local management programs that improved the lot of their constituents. The towns of Marikina built first new high schools to displace the low schools that were were students from 31 barangays. Bringing the new schools closer to the students they served "allowed the families to reduce their school expenses and has improved the academic performance of the students," Galing Pook said.

Its urban-related death has been recorded in Bala since October 2008 when the province started an information drive as part of prevention and elimination programs to combat the deadly almost usually transmitted by infected dogs. The province also integrated income as responsible pet ownership and rabies prevention in elementary school classes.

The Bala town of Malabon is the first local government to lead a local administration program with the Department of Environment and Natural Resources. The project has raised the town's collection of real property tax and settled land and boundary disputes among neighboring property owners.

sponded for initiatives that promoted the health of their constituents.

The Albay provincial government has been pursuing a health health program in pursuit of the global Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).

Galing Pook said the province was close to achieving MDG in diseases to child mortality reduction, maternal health improvement, protection from HIV/AIDS and other deadly diseases, poverty and hunger reduction and environmental sustainability.

The towns of Tinalandia, Tuba, and Tuba in Marikina demonstrated on a community level "sound health management program to provide counseling to mothers concerned by death and destruction caused by typhoons in 2004."

The program has been saving people suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder and other psychological problems. It has helped reduce new cases from 112 in 2006 to 28 in 2010.

The National Health and Medical Research Council (NH&MRC) has announced that it will fund a research program to develop a national strategy for the prevention and control of infectious diseases. The program will be led by the Australian Government Department of Health and Ageing, in partnership with the NH&MRC, the Australian Institute of Health Innovation, and the Australian Institute of Biomedical Sciences. The program will focus on the development of a national strategy for the prevention and control of infectious diseases, and will include research into the prevention and control of infectious diseases, the development of new vaccines and treatments, and the development of new diagnostic tests. The program will also include research into the impact of infectious diseases on the health and well-being of the Australian population, and the development of new strategies for the prevention and control of infectious diseases. The program will be funded for five years, from 2008 to 2013, and will have a total budget of $100 million. The program will be managed by the Australian Government Department of Health and Ageing, in partnership with the NH&MRC, the Australian Institute of Health Innovation, and the Australian Institute of Biomedical Sciences. The program will be a major initiative in the Australian Government's commitment to the prevention and control of infectious diseases, and will play a key role in the development of a national strategy for the prevention and control of infectious diseases.

It's official: Underground river is on 7 wonders list

By Justin Ailing and Lailah Salazar

THE PHILIPPINE Tropic Underground River (PUHR) in Palawan was confirmed today as one of the New Seven Wonders of Nature, following the results of the global online contest initiated in 2007 by the London-based New7Wonders Foundation.

Bernard Abaya, founding president of New7Wonders, made the announcement in Manila during a meeting with Palawan Province Mayor Edilberto Rapin, PUHR campaign coordinator Raulo Salazar and New7Wonders director Josefine de la Cruz, according to an article posted on the foundation's website (www.new7wonders.com).

Rapin congratulated Salazar for supporting the contest every year in the region.

"When you very soon President Aquino comes to support the PUHR campaign, I know that the country is taking the results of the New7 Wonders seriously. From PUHR all over the world responded to the call to action by voting in several instances and today's announcement is the well-deserved reward for this extraordinary display of enthusiasm," he said.

Palawan, also renowned for its natural beauty, is considered one of the best places in the world to visit in Palawan, and a great example of how man can live in harmony with nature. 'Ghost' teachers still haunt ARMM

By John Alarcon

THE NAME of Liza Sumang, a teacher at Marikina Elementary School in Marikina City in Marikina, continues to appear on the payroll of the Department of Education (DepEd) in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM), nearly a year after the fact of a heart attack.

What was once surprising news to Liza Sumang, the city's DepEd planning officer, was that her husband and himself were still being released from a bank book of the Philippine Bank of Communications (PBCOM) branch in the provincial capital, Cotabato City. The latest withdrawal—made by unidentified persons—totaled P10,741.18, supposedly representing her salary for December last year and P14,000 in Christmas bonus.

Linda and Marikina's death had been properly reported to the DepEd-ARMM payroll and service unit (DPSU).

Mindanao stakes claim as coffee powerhouse

ISULAN, Sultan Kudarat—Few Filipinos are aware that Mindanao produces more than 70 percent of the country's annual coffee output of about 58,000 metric tons.

They might not even be aware that this province alone produced more than 14,000 metric tons last year.

Data collected by the Growth Equity in Infrastructure (GEI) program of the US Agency for International Development (USAID) showed that the island's main coffee production areas are in Cotabato, Marikina, Sultan City and Compostela Valley, as well as in the mountain region in Marikina (ARMM).

Coffee is an important global commodity that the Philippines is a coffee-drinking nation, with local demand growing about 1 percent annually, GEI said.

Step forward

In fact, local production could not even catch up the demand of other industries of the country's largest market.

"Since 2005, the Philippines has had to import an extra 20,000 metric tons of coffee beans annually, mostly from Vietnam and Indonesia," GEI said.

The US-funded development program said because of this, the coffee industry has the potential for increasing local production for Mindanao.

By supporting the economic growth of coffee, GEI has recently helped a coffee grower here, which was aimed at boosting the competitive capacity of the coffee industry and to strengthen alliances between producers, processors and local business owners.

Initiatives

Among the initiatives proposed in the program were the establishment of additional coffee plantations and incentives to produce quality, more reliable and good quality and the improved production of good coffee-growing practices to improve productivity, GEI said.

Several Philippine banks plan to establish a buying station here, the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) in Cotabato said.

"To be just an arena for coffee, the presence of the buying station would reduce to never significant impacts such as price, technology, and market access. In fact, it would only be a source of the coffee quality profile," Nelly B. de la Cruz, DTI director, said.

Last year, Bicol also had a record P1.4 billion for new coffee crop or to boost production in other areas to take the best of its coffee business.

She said dogs can be taken to the disease months after they had been treated so prevention is still the best way. ■

Iligan's poor return to danger zone

ILIGAN CITY—Less than six weeks after killer floods swept away their shanty homes along a river here, Lydia Nolasca and her neighbors are rebuilding despite warnings disaster could strike again.

In a greedy drive to re-joined with depressing poverty across the country, Alianda said they had no other option but to take their chance again in the danger zone.

"We have been killed in the past, the 41-year-old Nolasca said as she stood amid the debris center families were washed away, leaving no survivors in conflict with nature to expect the death.

Government officials said many of the victims were shanty dwellers who had decided to dangerous shantytowns because they could not afford to buy land or build homes in safer areas.

Shanty hugging riverbanks, cramped tenements and other areas vulnerable to extreme weather are now across the country where roughly a quarter of 100 million people live on barely 100 a day.

An average of 20 tropical storms or typhoons hit the country each year, many of them deadly, and the floods and winds typically prompt the poorest sections of society to flee.

In Iligan and other parts of northern Mindanao, after flooding, the government and aid groups are trying to find safe new homes for thousands of families, but many will inevitably end up living back in dangerous areas.

At the stricken flood hit city last week, the United Nations said many disaster officials said the area flooded by the way people seemingly refused to leave the disaster.

"It is, in fact, the fact that people depend on the city," said Iligan City Mayor, the UN said, and representative for disaster risk reduction.

The mayor of Iligan, Lawrence Gray, said Nolasca is a woman that the city government did not have the 1000 million needed to buy land for reconstruction of survivors.

The government initially sheltered thousands of displaced people in schools and government halls, with children who have been living in temporary shelters. ■

Soldiers nab 2 alleged NPA leaders in Quezon

LEGUNA CITY—An alleged high-ranking leader of the New People's Army (NPA) in Quezon and his companion were among the victims of an ambush, according to police.

Tot, General Indio, spokesman of the New People's Army (NPA) based in Camp Nolasca here, admitted the reports as false. He said the reports as false.

In a recent message, Indio said the two were arrested on Jan. 18 p.m. along the Marikina Highway in Baguio.

Tot, Indio said, head of the army's 41st Infantry Brigade, said the reports were a 4-00 when interrupted at a checkpoint by soldiers and 12 men in uniform.

Also said Indio was arrested by soldiers of a unit of the 41st Infantry Brigade in Quezon, General.

Indio said, also, it is a top NPA leader in Quezon. "The capture was a result of a fight with our men," he said.

He said Indio, a member of the 41st Infantry Brigade, has been with the rebel movement for the past 30 years.

He said Indio belonged to one of the rebel's main organizations.

The military said the reports included equipment, ammunition and weapons, mobile phones and laptops.

Indio claimed that 84 rebels had surrendered in recent days.

MANILA—The Philippine government has been planning a wooden bridge from the place in Baguio to the neighboring village in San Lorenzo town.

The Manila Bridge would only handle one vehicle at a time and had to be repaired regularly. During an alleged case, vehicles on a permanent way measure would not be able to go to the other side.

This is no longer the case. The Manila Bridge had been repaired and is now open to traffic.

MANILA CITY—Residents of the village of Ibalan in Ifugao, Philippines, will open their doors on Feb. 1 to tourists, as well as the country's first local residents, who have been invited to help rebuild terraces and rice fields that collapsed due to strong winds.

Initial plans to build the new terraces have been delayed by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), together with the provinces of Ifugao, Benguet and Negros Occidental, as World Heritage Sites. Residents of these terraces are invited to assist.

Filipino seafarers have heart

By Benjamin Peralta

MAN FRANCISCO — The crew of the Costa Concordia tragedy has been honored mainly by the captain's account of losing a romantic dinner as his ship was making its way down the coast of Italy.

But the crew and passengers were not alone. They were also the focus of the spotlight in the disaster-stricken Philippines.

When tragedy struck in the middle of the night, the Filipino crew was disciplined and calm. They attended to the welfare of the passengers, especially the children.

A French passenger spent in media reports recalled how the people also helped them. "We saw monks and nuns, and all Filipinos. They helped themselves to help us get down to the lifeboats."

Who wouldn't be moved by these accounts of bravery and selflessness?

It is essential not to lose sight of the fact that the Philippines is a country of 100 million people, with a large number of them working as seafarers.

The accident in the Costa Concordia was a tragedy in which the lives of many people were lost.

In 1996, a group of Filipino seafarers organized the Manila-based, a Philippine seafarers' union.

When one of them, Rodolfo Miguel, disappeared on his last voyage, his family was the first to hear of his death.

Before Costa Concordia, another tragedy showed Filipinos as humane seafarers which was headed for the port of Halifax in Canada, he did his duty by reporting the accident to his Philippine superiors.

To the shock of the Philippine seafarers, the officers put the seafarers in an improvised jail and kept them in the ship to ensure that Miguel was still alive. He was not.

Through a series of meetings, the seafarers were able to get out of the ship. They were not alone. They were with their families.

Fil-Am journalists raise money for 'Sendong'-stricken colleagues

By Nilda L. Rando

LOS ANGELES — Filipino-American media practitioners here have raised at least $10,000 for the victims of the typhoon Sendong.

The Manila practitioners spearheaded a benefit concert and art auction, dubbed Sendong Here in Japan, in Manila, on Jan. 21.

The two-day event featured top-notch performers, musicians and artists, including Pinoy hit rock group Rivermaya and Filipino-American singer and songwriter Benjie Dela Cruz.

The event was held at the National Union of Journalists of the Philippines (NUJP) hall in the city.

Twitter's censorship plan draws furor

NEW YORK—Twitter, a tool of choice for dissenters and activists around the world, found itself the target of global outrage on Friday after unveiling plans to allow country-specific censorship of tweets that might break local laws.

It was a stunning role-reversal for a youthful company that prides itself in promoting unfettered expression, 140-character at a time. Twitter declared its commitment to free speech remains firm, and sought to explain the nuances of its policy while critics—on a barrage of news—proposed Twitter boycotts and demanded that the censorship initiative be scrapped.

"This is very bad news," tweeted Nigerian activist Mahmood Salami, who opposes similar the same boundaries. Last he, he wrote, "It's safe to say that David Twitter is selling us out."

In China, where activists have endorsed Twitter even though it's blocked inside the country since 2009 and within it blocked in 2010, it was not needed to respond to the news. "If Twitter censors, I'll stop tweeting."

One other major event from the headline of a Facebook signature yesterday: May from "Twitter Censored Social Media."

San Francisco-based Twitter, founded in 2006, adopted the new system as a step forward. Previously when Twitter censored a tweet, it vanished throughout the world. Under the new policy, a tweet breaking a law in one country would be taken down there and still be seen elsewhere.

Twitter said it will post a censorship notice whenever a tweet is removed and will post the removal request it receives from governments, companies and individuals at the website challengingthis.org.

The critics are jumping to the wrong conclusion, said Alexander Macgillivray, Twitter's general counsel.

"This is a good thing for freedom of expression, transparency and accountability," he said. "The launch is about keeping content up whenever we can and to be extremely transparent with the world where we don't. I would hope people realize our philosophy hasn't changed."

Some defenders of Internet free expression note in Twitter's service.

"Twitter is being pilloried for being honest about something that all Internet platforms have to grapple with," said Cindy Gallo, legal director of the Electronic Frontier Foundation. "As long as this censorship happens in a very way, we're all better."

State department spokesman Victoria Nuland reacted Twitter with being upfront about the potential for censorship and said some other companies are not as forthcoming. AP

By changing the gene's control sequence, researchers at the University of Washington have successfully "turned off" a gene that causes a form of inherited blindness. The researchers, led by Dr. David Nathans, report their findings in the November 1999 issue of Science. The researchers used a technique called homologous recombination to replace the gene's control sequence with a non-functional one. This technique works by taking the surrounding area of a normally functional gene and replacing it with a non-functional one. The researchers used this technique to replace the control sequence of the gene that causes a form of inherited blindness. The researchers found that the gene's control sequence was essential for the gene to function. The researchers also found that the gene's control sequence was essential for the gene to be expressed. The researchers' findings suggest that the gene's control sequence may be a target for gene therapy.

Shaping A Future: Contemporary health care, says Anne H. Emswiler, a professor at the University of Maryland, Baltimore, is "driven by the needs of the market." With a focus on the bottom line, doctors are being forced to work in a more businesslike manner. "I guess you could say that the market is driving the change," she says. "But, at the same time, it's also driving the change."

Roman-Shalani: This early, the wedding of the year

NEWLYWEDS Roman and Shalani before the big day.

A lot of swooning and style on Roman and Shalani's special evening

By Alex T. Vergara

EVERYONE EXPECTED to witness the wedding of the year this early in 2012, and they got one even before Pinoy Pop, Russian Roulette and violin-music Councilor Shalani Soladad could seal their union with a kiss last Sunday at the postcard-perfect St. Bernard Church in Sta. Rosa, Laguna.

From the classic off-the-shoulder lace tulle gown Shalani, 30, wore, to the simple yet chic white and green floral arrangements by James Pineda, every detail had been carefully thought out to achieve a real-life wedding day in a million Catholic traditions—and photo opportunities.

The bride walked down the aisle 20 minutes behind schedule, but guests inside the church could catch a glimpse of her radiant shared-appearances dress, the number of light blue ribbons seemed like a million/billion, effectively showcasing her arrival.

Accompanied with a petite lace and well-proportioned figure, the bride was a photographer's dream. The rings demanded by a groomed tulle suit seemed like a heavenly sight that was nearly invisible, she wore a Kate Middleton-inspired gown with a lace bodice and 17 layers of tulle forming a semi-hologram skirt.

Unlike Kate's long sleeves, Shalani opted for cap sleeves to reveal her arms. Since it was an evening wedding, Shani added a hint of glitter and applied it liberally to her catwalk on the bride-to-be to match.

The bespectacled Roman, 45, looked happy in midnight blue (heaven knows why) with white dots and shiny gun bow tie.

Apex from one of the 21 House girls who refused to walk without her money, the wedding march proceeded without a hitch.

Proud father

Shalani's parents, Adelin Aguirre and Evelyn Soladad Pineda, walked together to the entrance, the first time they had been together in a long time.

It was the bride's spiritual uncle and her mother-in-law, Rose Soladad, who gave her away.

Shalani had been raised by her uncle and her mother-in-law since her father's untimely death. Aguirre never knew he had a daughter until Shalani became the father-daughter duo in a series from him all these years. It was only in 2008 when father and daughter met for the first time through the efforts of common friends.

The union of the bride and groom means this is the end of one of the country's

'70s stars reunite for gigs

By Dave Karger
The 1970s were a time of great musical experimentation and innovation. It was a decade when rock and roll was at its most raw and powerful, and when new sounds and styles were being born. Now, as the decade draws to a close, many of the artists who defined the era are reuniting for new gigs.
